Chase banker accused of stealing $70K

Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr. announced Thursday the indictment of a former personal banker for his role in the theft of more than $700,000 from at least 17 Chase account holders over a six-month period. Fordin Francois, a 26-year-old former JPMorgan Chase personal banker, is charged with grand larceny in the second degree.

Raging BK inferno injures 24 of New York City's bravest

A massive six-alarm fire at 665 New York Avenue in East Flatbush burned for three and a half hours Thursday morning before firefighters were able to get it under control. Two dozen firefighters were sent to the hospital, mostly likely for heat exhaustion, The New York Times reported. More than 200 firefighters were needed to put out the blaze, which was believed to have been started by a lightning strike, according to the newspaper. METRO/DB

Fifth person to step on beach needle this month

Boy, 9, jabbed in the foot by needle at Rockaway Beach Tuesday, his mother tells Metro ◐ Lifeguards say it was the third incident that day

After Metro ran a story about four people being stuck by hypodermic needles on local beaches in the past three weeks, the paper was contacted by a woman who said her son was stabbed by a needle this week as well.

Little Gerard McManus was walking in the sand on Tuesday, July 24 after enjoying an afternoon at 104th Street beach in the Rockaways. That's when he was jabbed in the foot by a syringe embedded in the sand.

"I just stepped on a needle," the 9-year-old told his mother, Eileen McManus. Though there wasn't any blood, his foot had been punctured by the sandy needle and needed immediate attention, Eileen told Metro Thursday.

"I took him to the lifeguard who bandaged his foot so we could take him to the hospital," said McManus, 52, adding that the lifeguard told her it had been the third needle stabbing that day.

Because the nearest hospital was closed, McManus drove her terrified son to South Nassau Hospital, a 40-minute drive away. There, Gerard was given an X-ray and referred to an infectious disease specialist for blood testing.

"They're not worried about HIV so much, but we do have to worry about hepatitis — all because we weren't even aware that this was a problem," McManus said.

"I took him to the lifeguard who bandaged his foot so we could take him to the hospital."

Boy now on antibiotics

Gerard is going to be on antibiotics for the next 10 days. He will need to return for follow-up tests in one month and again in three months.

"Nobody in Rockaway knew this was happening. How come we weren't advised of this?" asked McManus, a homemaker who lives across the street from the beach. "We're out here every day playing in the sand, sliding around, and it scares me."

Parks Dept. not doing enough, woman says

While Eileen McManus, a mother of three, said she won't be discouraged from returning to the beach, she told Metro that after hearing about all the other incidents she will start checking the sand before she lets her kids play in it.

"I thought my son was an isolated incident," said McManus. "Obviously not. [The Parks Department] is complaining about budget cuts, but I see guys riding around checking the beaches on a jeep."

"They should be out of the jeep, really checking the sand," she added.

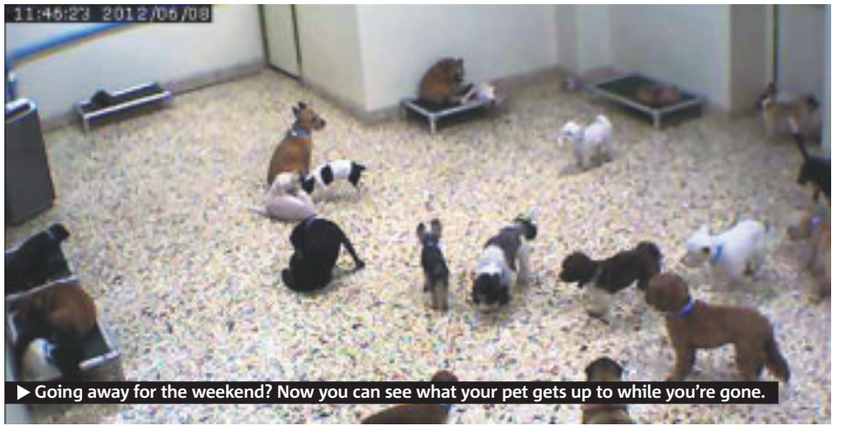
Spy on your pooch with doggie cams



▶ Going away for the weekend? Now you can see what your pet gets up to while you're gone.

From dressing their dogs in matching outfits to pushing them around in a stroller, New Yorkers are notorious for spoiling their four-legged friends.

But a new level of intense pet devotion is popping up all over Manhattan: Businesses now allow pet lovers to keep an eye on their dogs even when they're miles from home, via high-def doggie webcams.

"Many of our customers view their dogs as members of the family," said Mitch Marrow, founder and CEO of The Spot Experience, a pet boarding and grooming facility with locations throughout Manhattan. "They appreciate the ability to use our webcam technology to check in and verify their dog's happiness and safety while on summer vacation."

A dog owner himself, Marrow decided to install doggie cams at his boarding facilities after experiencing less than adequate canine surveillance elsewhere.

"I know people who literally hide inside their bedrooms to spy on their dog walkers."
SCOTT SHATZER

"All these people claimed to have these webcams and it was sort of like false advertising because you couldn't see anything," explained Marrow, who has a St. Bernard and a bullmastiff. "I said if we're going to provide webcams, let's do it in a real way."

Members of The Spot Experience can log in online and click between 16 different high-resolution cameras positioned around their four pet boarding locations.

"The biggest advantage is transparency they provide," said Marrow. "We have them set up in a way that isn't misleading. There's no hiding."

For the more low-tech pet owner, there's still always good old-fashioned spying.

"I know people who literally hide inside their bedrooms to spy on their dog walkers," said Scott Shatzer, who owns Your Spoiled Pets on Grand Street in Brooklyn. "A bunch of my clients have done it, and it's just a way to make sure that whoever you're hiring is doing what you hired them to do."

Man gets West Nile virus

STATEN ISLAND. A Staten Island man is the first person to be infected with West Nile virus so far this year, the city Health Department announced Thursday.

The man, who is more than 50 years old, was hospitalized with viral meningitis and has since been released, according to city officials.

The virus was spotted in mosquitoes at New Dorp Beach and Bulls Head on Staten Island earlier this month.

It's also appeared in mosquitoes and a dead crow in the town of Northport on Long Island.

The last time someone was killed by the virus was last year, when two people died in the city and one 70-year-old man in Nassau County died. More than 30 other people were infected last year around this same time.

West Nile virus can be lethal to people with weakened immune systems.

De Blasio: Open books on fines

NEW YORK. Public Advocate Bill de Blasio filed a lawsuit Thursday against Mayor Michael Bloomberg's administration for refusing to reveal data on the increasing amount of fines the city has levied against small businesses. The suit names city agencies for not turning over records de Blasio requested. According to de Blasio, there has been an increase in fine-based revenue and he wants to know which neighborhoods are bearing the impact of enforcement. Budget revenue from fines has doubled to $850 billion over the past decade. METRO/AB

Twtter suffers second outage in five weeks

SAN FRANCISCO. Twitter suffered its second widespread outage in 5 weeks on Thursday, a blow to the micro-blogging service's reputation and reliability.

Twitter — infamous for its "fail whale" outage messages in its early years — went dark for hours on June 21. On Thursday, users trying to log on to its website were greeted only by an incomplete error message: "Twitter is currently down for. We expect to be back in." REUTERS

Pop music loud and bland: Study

LONDON. Comforting news for anyone over the age of 35, scientists have worked out that modern pop music really is louder and does all sound the same.

Researchers in Spain used a huge archive known as the Million Song Dataset to study pop songs from 1955 to 2010.

A team led by artificial intelligence specialist Joan Serra at the Spanish National Research Council ran music from the last 50 years through some complex algorithms and found that pop songs have become intrinsically louder and more bland in terms of the chords, melodies and types of sound used. REUTERS

Mitt's comments leave a sour taste

CARL COURT/AFP/GETTY IMAGES

▶ U.S. Republican presidential candidate, Mitt Romney, leaves after meeting British Prime Minister, David Cameron, in Downing Street in central London on Thursday.

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney's high-profile overseas trip got off to a rocky start on Thursday when he was forced to clarify a comment seen as criticizing London's handling of the Summer Olympics that he came to celebrate.

The Republican candidate ruffled British feathers ahead of his visit by appearing to suggest in a U.S. television interview that London was not ready for the games, whose opening ceremony in the British capital is held on Friday.

"It's hard to know just how well it will turn out. There are a few things that were disconcerting," Romney told NBC when asked to analyze London's handling of the Olympics.

He cited what he said was the threat of a strike by immigration and customs officials. "That obviously is not something which is encouraging."

The comments were seized on by British media and Prime Minister David Cameron defended Britain's handling of the games, after he was forced to deploy extra troops to bolster security to cover a shortfall left by a private contractor.

"We are holding an Olympic Games in one of the busiest, most active, bustling cities anywhere in the world. Of course it is easier if you hold an Olympic Games in the middle of nowhere."
PRIME MINISTER DAVID CAMERON

"We are holding an Olympic Games in one of the busiest, most active, bustling cities anywhere in the world. Of course it is easier if you hold an Olympic Games in the middle of nowhere," Cameron said during a news conference at the Olympic Park in London on Thursday.

The comments, in response to a question about transport problems ahead of the games, could be uncomfortable reading for Romney, who has made much of his record as the man who saved the failing Olympics in Salt Lake City. REUTERS

Penn State: We took hit from NCAA as alternative to four-year hiatus

Penn State University accepted unprecedented NCAA penalties as punishment for a child sex abuse cover-up because they were better than the alternative: a four-year death sentence for its football program, according to school trustees.

The trustees said in a statement yesterday after a meeting with President Rodney Erickson that it found the "punitive sanctions difficult" and the process with the governing body of U.S. college sports "unfortunate."

The current penalty bars it from postseason bowl games for four years, but allows regular season play. REUTERS

"But as we understand it, the alternatives were worse as confirmed by NCAA President Mark Emmert's recent statement that Penn State was likely facing a multiyear death sentence."

A man whose 2001 sexual assault as a boy in a Penn State locker room shower by former assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky played a key role in the scandal that engulfed the university has come forward for the first time and plans to file suit against the university, his lawyers said on Thursday.

The man, known as Victim 2, did not testify at the trial — but former graduate assistant coach Mike McQueary testified he had seen Sandusky assaulting a boy about 10 years old in the shower at the Penn State locker room. REUTERS

London is ready for a party at the 2012 Olympic Summer Games Metro gives you a sneak peak at some of the Opening Ceremony Will Paul McCartney perform? And will Becks be there?

Let the Games begin

An estimated 4 billion pairs of eyes will be watching as London becomes the first city in history to host the Olympic Games for the third time. With its prior hosting duties in 1908 and 1948, the city known for its pomp and pageantry is planning a spectacular opener that will likely rival even Beijing's dazzling display in 2008.

London enlisted the guidance of English director Danny Boyle, famous for his film "Slumdog Millionaire," to coordinate a show-stopping Opening Ceremony. Boyle reportedly went through $42 million in his effort to tell the story of Britain's history in an hours-long ceremony that transforms the Olympic stadium into rural England.

Boyle's spectacular, dubbed "Isles of Wonder," has called upon the help of 10,000 volunteers. Details have been tightly under wraps, though it has proven difficult to hide an event of such massive scale from the public. Final rehearsals caught the attention of people near Olympic Village this week.

Andrew Codling, a special constable — similar to a volunteer policeman — has been helping with Olympic preparations for months and shared some of what he saw.

"The whole performance is stunning with so much going on throughout the whole piece," Codling told Metro.

Team USA, along with every other country's team, will be featured in a parade of Olympians, dressed in the official uniforms of their nations

"I am really excited and really inspired," beach volleyball player and two-time gold medalist Kerri Walsh told Metro on the eve of the Opening Ceremony. "I am going for gold here in London and every day the butterflies get a little bigger."

When details of Boyle's multimillion dollar ceremony began to leak to the press, the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games launched the hashtag #savethesurprise to encourage people not to share too much. That hasn't stopped Olympic enthusiasts from spilling a few details, though. Here's what Metro's inside sources say the Opening Ceremony might include:

- Boyle's rural England theme has long been rumored to incorporate live animals. Our snitch tells us there will be sheep, goats and cows.
- London is well-known for its dreary skies, though weather is expected to hold tight for the ceremony. Don't fret — rumor has it the ceremony will include rain-producing synthetic clouds.
- No British spectacle would be complete without the most famous spy of all. Watch closely for an appearance by James Bond in the form of actor Daniel Craig — and he might just be repelling from a helicopter.
- Soccer superstar David Beckham, proud Brit that he is, may be kicking a "flaming" soccer ball into the audience. We're assuming they're not real flames.
- Like everything else about the Opening Ceremony, the musical acts are decisively British. Our sources tell us Sir Paul McCartney and musician Mike Oldfield have both been spotted practicing.

Only one athlete can carry the American flag and lead the 529 members of Team USA through the Opening Ceremony.

This year, that honor goes to fencer Mariel Zagunis of Beaverton, Ore. She earned her position as flagbearer through a vote among her fellow teammates.

Zagunis, 27, is a two-time Olympic champion who won gold at the 2004 Olympics in Athens and again in 2008 in Beijing. Her win in 2004 made her the first U.S. fencer to win an Olympic gold medal in a hundred years. She is the third fencer to carry the American flag during the Opening Ceremony, joining Norman Armitage in 1952 and 1956, as well as Janice Lee Romary in 1968.

SO MONEY CAN'T BUY YOU LOVE ... MAYBE GOLD

- Study shows direct correlation between country's income and athletic success at the Olympic Games
- London may have decided 'home-court advantage'
- Breaking down top apps to enhance experience

Can money buy Olympic medals? Not exactly, but a new study by two Goldman Sachs analysts shows that a country's income can have a significant effect on how their athletes perform and — in turn — how many medals they bring home.

The report, called "The Olympics and Economics" by Jose Ursua and Kamakshya Trivedi, takes a close look at the effect money and income can have on a country's overall success and within specific sports at the games. They took a look at variables including GDP per capita, the ratio of income to that of the U.S., democracy and hosting duties, and then studied those combined effects on winning medals.

It turns out that richer countries — those with "superior growth environments and higher incomes" — can expect to win more medals. The sports that were most influenced by those factors were canoeing, diving, fencing, swimming and table tennis. Equestrianism, gymnastics and wrestling were also influenced by the factors.

Adversely, sports that aren't as expensive to train for, like football, softball and triathlon, were the sports least affected by the factors.

"Progress and improvement in sport," the authors wrote. "This trend — with a few economically significant countries winning a bulk of the Olympic medals on offer — has continued in recent times. For example, less than 10 countries participating in the 2008 Beijing Olympics won more than half of the almost 1,000 gold, silver and bronze medals that were distributed."

Additionally, the report proves that "home-court advantage" is a real thing. Countries that are hosting the Olympics tend to bring home more medals than they do when traveling elsewhere for the games, though not in every sport.

"In some cases, hosting the Olympics has meant increasing the number of medals by more than 50 percent, with respect to what countries would have otherwise attained," the report stated.

Historically, hosting countries can expect to win about 1.5 to 3 more medals per game in events like cycling, gymnastics, rowing, sailing, swimming and wrestling. Other sports like football, rhythmic gymnastics and water polo don't find as much benefit from the so-called "home-court advantage."

But when it comes to a financial win for host countries, the results have been mixed. The 1972 Munich Olympics and the 1976 Montreal Olympics both had significant financial losses. However, the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, the 1992 Barcelona Olympics and the 1996 Atlanta Olympics all turned a profit, per the report.

The researchers note that it is too early to predict whether the London Olympics will be profitable, but the city's infrastructure plans for the Games were finished on schedule and even below budget.

Spice Girls to reunite at London Games

Americans can expect to see one of their favorite British things at this summer's Olympics: the Spice Girls!

Rumor has it Geri Halliwell (Ginger Spice), Emma Bunton (Baby Spice), Melanie Chisholm (Sporty Spice), Melanie Brown (Scary Spice) and Victoria Beckham (Posh Spice) will take the stage at the closing ceremony on Aug. 12.

According to the Hollywood Reporter, the 1990s girl group that just recently reunited are on a lineup that also includes fellow British artists George Michael, The Who, Take That and Jessie J.

One Direction, a British boy band that's enjoying fame in the U.S., is also expected to make an appearance. Comedian Russell Brand may also take the stage in a musical act.

The Spice Girls will likely perform two songs at the ceremony, and one of them is expected to be their number one hit "Wannabe."

Don't think about crossing 'brand police'

There is a crackdown taking place in London, and we're not talking about the thousands of troops deployed to secure the city.

We're talking about the "brand police" — hundreds of workers for the London organizing Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) and the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) employed to seek and penalize businesses that use unauthorized variations of the Olympic brand and logos.

Sponsors like Adidas, McDonald's, Coca-Cola are among those entitled to use the London 2012 brand.

"[London] is closure. Now it's just a matter of how many toppings I want on my sundae."

US SWIMMER MICHAEL PHELPS, TALKING ABOUT PARTICIPATING IN HIS LAST OLYMPIC GAMES

Poll: Americans plan to follow Olympic action

According to a poll conducted by Marist College Institute for Public Opinion, the majority of Americans will be watching at least some of the upcoming games in London.

Eighty-percent of adults plan to tune in, including 19 percent who said they will be watching a great deal of the events and competitions and 23 percent who said they will follow a good amount of the games. Twenty percent said they have no plans to follow the Olympics, while 50 percent of Americans said they were looking forward to seeing how many medals U.S. athletes can win.

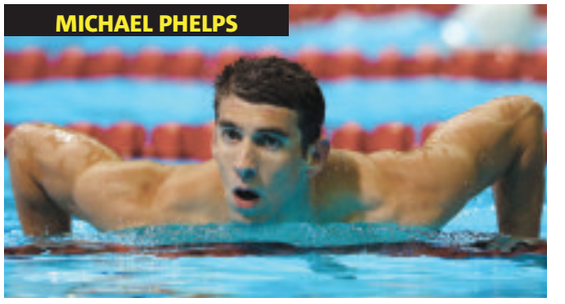
THE STARS OF TEAM USA

The best athletes our country has to offer ◗ Meet or be reintroduced to the faces that will dominate global airwaves over the next two weeks ◗ These are the Americans who are seeking gold — and gold only

LOLO JONES

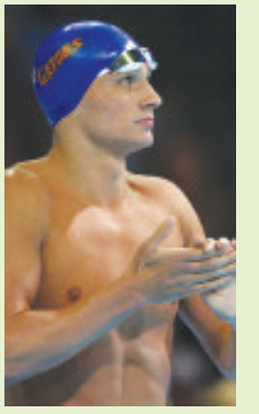
The enigmatic hurdler lost out on what seemed like a surefire medal in Beijing when she clipped a hurdle. Since then, she's garnered plenty of attention for her revealing interviews and modeling stints, but how she'll perform on the track in London is one of the biggest questions in these Games.

MICHAEL PHELPS



There isn't much left for Phelps to conquer as an Olympian, after his record eight golds in 2008 and his 14 gold medals overall — also a record. But with 16 medals total, he still trails Russian gymnast Larisa Latynina for the most medals of all-time by two. That is what is at stake in these games. Plenty of motivation for Phelps.

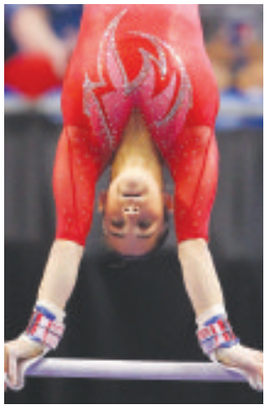
RYAN LOCHTE



If Phelps is to be upstaged in the pool, it will be by his teammate, Lochte, who is a year older than Phelps but has emerged from Phelps' shadow in recent months to become a charismatic foil to the legend. The Canandaigua, N.Y., native will go head to head with Phelps in both the 200 and 400 meters, events that are shaping up as the most compelling of the entire 2012 Olympic games.

ALY RAISMAN

The U.S. women's gymnastics team enters these games as a favorite for the gold — something they've done just once, in 1996. If they are to meet their 2012 expectations, it will be in large part because of Raisman, of Needham, Mass., the most experienced member of the team and arguably its best all-around performer. She will be a leader both on and off the mat. The 18-year-old is the oldest girl on the team.

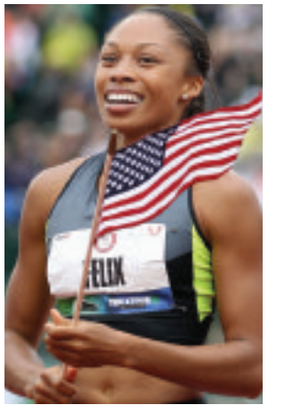


EVELYN STEVENS

Stevens, from Acton, Mass., took up cycling as a hobby in 2008 and is now poised to medal in London. A former investment banker on Wall Street, Stevens has quickly climbed the ranks of cycling's elite, becoming the first American woman to win the Fleche Wallone in Belgium in April.

ALLYSON FELIX

She made a name for herself in the U.S. track and field trials for being awarded a spot in the 100-meter after her tie with Jeneba Tarmoh. But it is in the 200-meter that Felix could be remembered, after achieving a personal best to clinch her Olympic spot. Compared to the great Wilma Rudolph, a 100-200 gold combo is not out of the question. The 26-year-old is a two-time Olympic silver medalist and three-time champ in the 200.



DIANA TAURASI

Taurasi was almost forced off the U.S. Olympic team after reports of a failed drug test last year while playing professionally in Turkey. It was later determined the test was fraudulent, and Taurasi was cleared. Arguably the best women's player in the world, Taurasi will join five fellow UConn alums — and coach Geno Auriemma — in a quest for total redemption. The U.S. women are the defending Olympic champions from 2008.

LEBRON JAMES

James finally broke through last month as an NBA champion, and so the Summer of LeBron continues in London. There has been much debate over whether this collection of talent could defeat the legendary 1992 "Dream Team." The U.S. needs to worry about '12 first, and James can further rehabilitate his post-Decision reputation by leading the Americans to a second straight gold.

JUSTIN GATLIN

At one point, Gatlin was one of the most noted sprinters in U.S. history, winning gold at the 2004 games in Athens. But Gatlin tested positive for a banned substance in '06 and received a four-year ban. Now Gatlin is back, presumably drug-free, with a huge chip on his shoulder. JEFF GOLDBERG

Five events you shouldn't miss

You remember Kerri Strug and Usain Bolt 'sprinting to daylight' You remember what events will you remember in '12?

There are always a handful of marquee events at each Olympics which capture the entire country's attention.

Some are easy to predict — like Michael Phelps and the U.S. swimming team's epic 4x100-meter freestyle relay win over France. Some, like the men's volleyball team's gold medal performance weeks after their coach's father-in-law was murdered in Beijing, took the public completely by surprise.

Metro takes a look at some of the bigger events in London and tries to pin down a few you will remember.

MARK OSBORNE
mark.osborne@metro.us

Men's 200m IM

The biggest rivalry of the games could actually come from a pair of teammates — U.S. swimmers Ryan Lochte and Michael Phelps.

The men's 200-meter individual medley will be the showdown between the two unquestioned best all-around swimmers in the world. It's 50 meters each of butterfly, back, breast and freestyle. The two were clear of the field by three seconds at the 2011 World Championships, where Lochte won. But Phelps is the defending gold medalist.

Women's soccer

Abby Wambach, Hope Solo and Alex Morgan burst onto the sports scene last summer during the Women's World Cup. They became media darlings almost overnight.

Just one problem — they didn't win. Japan took the Cup and left the defending Olympic champion Americans feeling hollow. Now they can make up for that and reclaim the glory of Mia Hamm, Julie Foudy and Brandi Chastain. Brazil will be good, but the U.S. would love to get revenge on Japan.

Men's 100-meter

What if I told you Usain Bolt isn't even the fastest man in his own country anymore?

In case you missed it last month, the reigning gold medalist and world record holder lost in the Jamaican Olympic trials to Yohan Blake. And it wasn't particularly close.

Blake won the World Championships last year too, but with the caveat of Bolt having faulted and been disqualified. All of this sets up what could well be the best 100-meter contest since Ben Johnson vs. Carl Lewis in the 1988 games. (Let's hope it doesn't end the same way.)

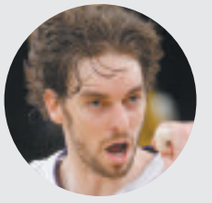
Speaking of steroids, don't forget American Justin Gatlin, the 2004 gold medalist returning from a drug ban.

Women's all-around

The name to know in women's gymnastics this year is the United States' Jordyn Wieber. She is the reigning all-around World Champion and the one America's hopes rest on. There's no more Shawn Johnson and no more Nastia Liukin, who took this crown in 2008 in a heated competition between her teammate Johnson and China's Yang Yilin.

Remember the incessant age controversy about China's athletes in 2008 that created an intense rivalry? Well, the U.S. would like to win again — and a win in the team all-around would be nice too. Russia's Viktoria Komova could steal gold from Wieber also.

Men's basketball



We don't know if the U.S. men's basketball team will appear in the game, obviously, but there is a good chance. And we're really looking forward to the epic rematch of 2008's gold medal game between them and Spain.

You know the U.S. team's roster — LeBron James, Kobe Bryant, Kevin Durant and a handful of other All-Stars. The one thing they don't have? Size.

That what makes a potential matchup with Spain so intriguing. They have three of the best centers in the league with Pau Gasol, Marc Gasol and Oklahoma City's blocking machine Serge Ibaka. Let's hope it gets physical.

Carl Lewis believes in US track

With 10 Olympic medals, nine of which are gold, American track and field superstar Carl Lewis continues to be the standard for success on the international level.

Lewis, 51, is still involved with the sport as the spokesman for the Hershey Track & Field Games, which introduces the sport to children in elementary and middle schools. Lewis has been a part of the Hershey's program for six years and is hoping to see an Olympian emerge from the event someday.

Lewis said that a meeting with Olympic track and field legend Jesse Owens when he was younger helped spur his involvement with the Hershey games. He spoke to Metro about the 2012 Olympics in London and how the U.S. track team stacks up.

"I think the Americans are going to do better than people think."
CARL LEWIS, 10-TIME OLYMPIC MEDALIST

U.S. sprinter Justin Gatlin won the gold in 2004 then missed the 2008 Olympics due to a doping ban. Does he have a chance to challenge the Jamaican sprinters in the 100-meters?

It's an interesting story, because I think he served his time and he's back and running again. The part of the story that is being missed because of the Jamaicans and the talk about them — [Gatlin] could also be the second person to repeat as the 100-meter champions. Everyone is talking about the Jamaicans, but if Gatlin repeats, he'd be the second person ever to repeat. [Ed. Note: Lewis is the other athlete to do it. He won gold in 1984 and 1988, after Ben Johnson failed a drug test.] No one is talking about that, and he has that on him as well.

There will be a lot of pressure on him for sure.

I don't think the pressure is big to him. He's been through a lot and running very well. I think the Americans are going to do better than people think. I think we've got a great shot at winning the relay if we put the right people on — or more importantly, we leave the right people off because we have trouble with certain people. I think we're going to do better than most people think.

What about the Jamaican sprinters, Usain Bolt and Yohan Blake. Is this a golden generation we're seeing now or has the American program fallen behind?

I'm not following them enough. I'm getting the same question and I follow them as much as the average American. I'm busy with the Hershey games and thing like that.

But wow, you've got all these athletes in a row running great. Time will tell. I always tell people that history defines greatness. I think we will do very well in the Olympics.

Does Bolt need another gold to be truly great?

Here again I go back to anyone who wins the Olympic gold medal is one of the greats. But history defines greatness. We'll see what happens. Eight years ago, people were talking about [U.S. sprinter] Maurice Green and saying he was going to be one of the greatest of all-time. He tried to repeat in 2004 and he ended up in third and you never saw him on the national team again.

▶ Lewis won four gold medals in his first Olympics appearance in Los Angeles in 1984. He took golds in the 100 meters, 200 meters, long jump and 4x100-meter relay.

Q&A

After a positive drug test, U.S. runner Debbie Dunn has had to withdraw from the 4x400-meter relay team. How does that affect the relay team?

I think the United States will win it. It is disheartening as we continue to fight these issues. I think that's the bigger issue. I will admit, I'm glad she has said, 'OK, I will accept my situation,' instead of the game a lot of them continue to play.

But the United States has been so strong in the 4x400 and my favorite athlete in the games is [former Giants and current Jaguars cornerback Aaron Ross's wife] Sanya Richards-Ross, and she is running better than ever and might even set the American record.

THESE ARE THE PEOPLE IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD

Ben Stiller and Vince Vaughn talk about getting the gang back together
Stiller likes working with people who are funnier than he is
Vaughn likes throwing his young daughter into the deep end

One of the benefits of doing an ensemble comedy is catching up with old friends. At least, that's how it was on "The Watch" for Ben Stiller and Vince Vaughn, who co-star with Jonah Hill and Richard Ayoade as concerned citizens investigating what turns out to be an alien invasion in their suburban neighborhood. Stiller and Vaughn previously squared off in "Dodgeball," but here they play it a bit chummier. "I love working with these guys. It's great to work with the people who make you laugh and who are funnier," Stiller admits.

Reunions aside, Stiller also enjoyed letting loose in a comedy that didn't have the same restrictions as his more family-friendly fare.

"The fun thing for me is to be a part of a movie where you don't have to worry," Stiller says. "Being in an R-rated film, you can have a lot more freedom."

And that freedom doesn't just mean more violence and cursing, but it extends to how the characters are depicted. These guys aren't forced into experiencing personal growth.

"I don't think it was about having it all sort of tied up in bow. It was more about these guys hanging out and how they affected each other, but it wasn't like about teaching lessons or anything," Stiller says.

Vince Vaughn's character has an argumentative relationship with an unruly teenage daughter trying to grow up too fast. In real life, Vaughn has just welcomed his first daughter. So did the movie give him any premonitions of troubles to come?

"My daughter is just 19, 20 months now," he says. "Thankfully I'm a long, long way from answering any of those questions as far as being protective. But I have encouraged her to get on some scooters, motor scooters, motorized vehicles, that kind of stuff. I threw her in the pool — but she swam, so it's fine."

Of course, he won't pass up an opportunity to joke about potential suitors coming round the house. "That happened the other day, I had a 3-year-old ring the bell. I said it was little bit inappropriate. She's too young to make her own decisions. They have to walk before they fly."

While Stiller, Vaughn and Hill are familiar faces to comedy audiences, the fourth member of their neighborhood watch might not be: British actor and director Richard Ayoade, who directed last year's "Submarine" (executive-produced by Stiller), admits he felt like he stuck out a bit in the cast. "I've never been in a film, not really," Ayoade admits. "My wife said — and she's right — it's going to look like I won a competition to be in a film with movie stars. And there were several days when I was like, 'Why are

'Step Up Revolution'

Starring: Ryan Guzman, Kathryn McCormick
Director: Scott Speer
Grade: ❶❷❸❹❺

The characters in each of the "Step Up" series's installments have always come second to the dance sequences, meaning that transporting the franchise to Miami and introducing an entirely new cast is essentially as meaningless as the film's flash mob as political activism plot. A local dance crew stages spontaneous routines on the streets in the hopes of winning a viral video challenge worth $100,000. But when a developer threatens to tear down their neighborhood, the tycoon's daughter shows her new friends that their fancy footwork can be used for more than filthy lucre. Once again, the dance sequences are spectacular — and plot and characterization are clearly not the point. But can we please get a movie that offers more than your average music video? METRO

Travis Wall has 'All the Right Moves'

The work of Travis Wall is everywhere. The young dancer is choreographing routines on the current season of Fox's "So You Think You Can Dance"; his moves are featured in the film "Step Up Revolution," hitting theaters Friday; and on Tuesday, his mission to found the dance company Shaping Sound with his friends is documented on the new Oxygen reality series, "All the Right Moves."

The 24-year-old "SYTYCD" veteran — he was the runner-up on the competition's second season — has, undeniably, become a bankable name in the dance world. That notoriety doesn't always sit well with his pals — including Shaping Sound co-founders Nick Lazzarini, winner of the first season of "SYTYCD," and Teddy Forance, who has performed with Lady Gaga and Janet Jackson — which makes Wall's story perfect for a docu-series. Artistry and drama collide every episode. "When we were getting things kicked off, I definitely took the leadership role," Wall said of his group at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Wednesday. "And through the season, we definitely see control struggles."

FOR FULL COVERAGE FROM THE TELEVISION CRITICS ASSOCIATION PRESS TOUR, FOLLOW AMBER: @AMBERATMETRO.

From Episode 1 there is concern over the shadow Wall's spotlight may cast on his partners, particularly after the suggestion is made to rename the company Travis Wall's Shaping Sound. "That was not the intention of starting this dance company, to throw my name on it," Wall insisted.

Instead, Wall hopes Shaping Sound, whose co-founders were just nominated for an Emmy for their choreography on "Dancing with the Stars," receives even more widespread recognition for their talent.

"Our goal in the entire series is to … tour the United States with our dance company," Wall said. "We can pay our dancers. We can travel the country together, have fun, party, dance and just have the time of our lives."

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Pattinson packs up his bags

Not surprisingly, Robert Pattinson has packed up and left the Los Angeles home he shared with Kristen Stewart. This comes after Us Weekly published photos of his girlfriend and "Twilight" co-star in the midst of a not-so-discreet fling with director Rupert Sanders.

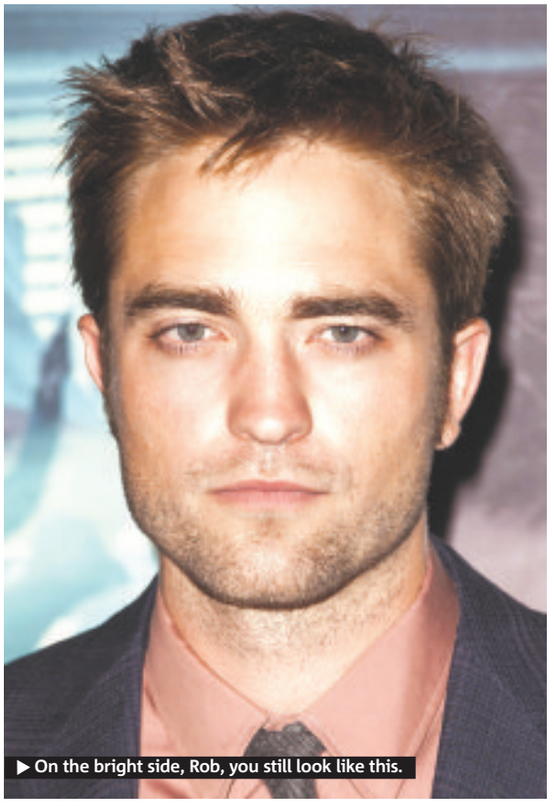
Although Stewart issued a weepy public appeal for forgiveness, it appears Pattinson isn't having it — maybe because, like Us Weekly, he noticed that the L.A. Dodgers hat she was wearing in the photos looks suspiciously similar to one he's frequently spotted in.

"I'm not sure they'll be able to recover from this," a source associated with "Twilight" tells People, adding that Pattinson isn't in contact with Stewart and "is heartbroken and angry."

Tell us, Source, how does Kristen feel? "Kristen really loves Rob more than anything. He's all that matters to her."

There's plenty more to come from this: Stewart is reportedly preparing to personally apologize to Sanders' wife, and the final "Twilight" circus doesn't hit theaters until November. In other words: If we have to feel like a sleazy "Cheaters" B-team crew, so do you — so try to sit back and enjoy the ride.



▶ On the bright side, Rob, you still look like this.

Kutcher is a serious something

We occasionally forget this, but Ashton Kutcher is an actor — and apparently, he takes it seriously sometimes. While shooting his new Steve Jobs biopic, Kutcher is reportedly insisting to stay in character between takes.

"I didn't understand when he started yelling at people. A PA had to explain to me that Ashton was insistent on staying in character at all times on set," a source tells RadarOnline. "I'm pretty sure this is a whole new way of acting for him, it's kind of bizarre. He's not been nice to people on set. He's been really mean to everyone, even when he's off camera."

Don't forget Ashton: Jobs was a brilliant inventor in addition to a cranky boss. We're expecting something shiny by the time you're done.

Get off their lawn!

Kristen Bell and fiance Dax Shepard live next door to Justin Bieber, but they're not exactly enjoying it.

"The music and the parties and the paparazzi, I mean, it's like living in Lebanon now," Shepard claimed during an appearance on "The View" (Lebanon — are we missing something about you?).

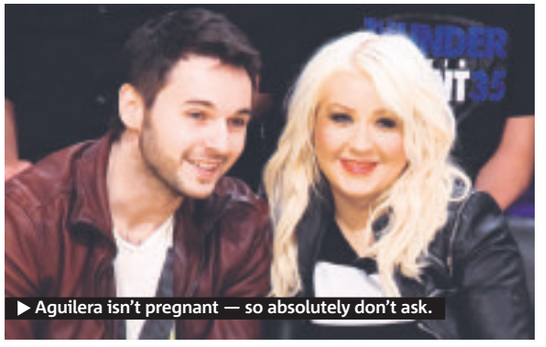
Bell was more willing to cut the kid some slack. "In his defense, I will say we don't know the exact house the music is coming from," Bell admitted. "We just know since he moved in, the music has been blaring."

Guys, he's 18 and drives a $100,000 sports car — you're lucky it's not parked in your pool.

Talking points

Lohan, girl, you're killing us

Lindsay Lohan has reportedly been involved in another car accident, according to TMZ. During a shopping trip in West Hollywood, the troubled starlet reportedly rear-ended a silver Mustang that wasn't moving, causing "minor and cosmetic" damage to the Mustang and Lohan's Porsche. "We were sitting at a light and somebody hit us," the driver of the other car tells the website, adding that a male companion of Lohan's left his number with them before they took off to avoid paparazzi.



▶ Aguilera isn't pregnant — so absolutely don't ask.

We'd certainly be afraid to ask

Christina Aguilera prompted pregnancy rumors after she was spotted leaving a doctor's office this week with boyfriend Matthew Rutler, but insiders insist to Hollyscoop that the singer and reality show judge is not expecting. Instead, Aguilera was reportedly at the Sherman Oaks Medical Center for a routine checkup relating to an old back injury.

Tough pill to swallow for Jeremy Renner

Jeremy Renner doesn't have the best luck with flights, he tells Jimmy Kimmel during an interview. "A lot of times when I'm on the plane, I have to sleep. And I'm not a good sleeper on the plane," the "Bourne Legacy" star explains. "I had to fly from London to Los Angeles for dinner, and then get right back on a plane to London. Somebody gave me some pills, like Ambien. So I took a little sleeping pill, popped it and realized nothing's happening — but something else was happening!" Renner soon realized he had accidentally taken Viagra. "Not only did I not sleep the entire flight, but there was ... 'camping' ... happening."

Snoop talks Catalpa, the 20th anniversary of 'Doggystyle' and surprises

Snoop Dogg is a busy man. In the past few months the rapper and music mogul has participated in a landmark live concert performance with his dead friend, released "Ladies First," a mixtape of artists he's working with and just earlier this week released a single from his upcoming reggae album. To say nothing of the preparations he's made for this weekend's Catalpa festival, which he headlines with the Black Keys. So when tha Doggfather asked if he could do an interview via e-mail, we accepted. We made only slight tweaks to his answers as for punctuation.

Are there plans for any surprise collaborations at Catalpa?
I always have surprises for my fans, you'll have to stay tuned, ya dig?!?
"Doggystyle" will turn 20 next year, and you're performing the album in its entirety on Sunday night. Tell me about any other anniversary plans you have to commemorate the release.
I got sumthin on tha back burner but u gotta stay tuned in to see what that is. Be on da lookout for sumthin real special to keep ya knockin for anutha 20, ya dig?!?
Does it feel like that really was 20 years ago?
Time flies when u got a schedule and stay busy like myself. I stay ready so I ain't gotta get ready.
Speaking of a lasting legacy, your daughter has entered the music business. How do you keep her safe from the darker sides of the biz?
It's a learning process each day that we are both going through. Less bulls— the better.
What kind of advice do you give her, and how is it different from the advice that you'd give any up and comer?
To stay true to herself and to never give up. She's gonna be a superstar.
Let's talk a little about your appearance at Coachella with what has come to be known as Virtual 2Pac. Do you think that this sort of technology is the future of concerts?
I really can't tell you. But what the most important thing is Dr. Dre and Snoop Dogg did it first. And they damn sure did it the best.
Like the lineup of this weekend's fest, your music tastes seem so diverse. Could you do me a favor and put your iPod or iPhone or whichever device is nearest to you on shuffle and tell us the first five songs that come up?
Rick James, Teena Marie, Blowfly, Curtis Mayfield, Mayer Hawthorne.

Cohen: Joyous and real

Adam Cohen is a snappy dresser. The singer/songwriter (and son of Leonard Cohen) just finished a photo shoot for Elle Canada and recently did one for another fashion-oriented magazine, Dressed to Kill, which is based in his hometown of Montreal.

"I enjoy fine clothes, I have to admit," he says.

Cohen's love of finery seems a last vestige of vanity as he admits that his new record, "Like a Man," is the result of an emotional low. "Like A Man" follows three albums, including one with his band Low Millions, that left him feeling only failure.

"I was disillusioned to the point that I was about to abandon the business right before this record," he says. "I thought I was over. I felt that I had been given chance after chance, and record deal after record deal, and I'd blown it."

That admission pushed Cohen toward a new attitude.

"Whereas before, my records were filled with anguish, anxiety, insecurity and self-doubt, and had cost a fortune and ended up sounding eager and expensive, this one was to the contrary," he reveals. "It was joyous, vulnerable and real. That explains why it's the coming out party it is for me."

British fashion gold in NYC

All eyes are on London for the next two weeks And though we're not there to shop Oxford Street (and cheer on Team USA), here are some British brands that have won gold stateside

Topshop

Topshop's on-trend yet affordable clothing is a NYC favorite. The SoHo store opened in 2009, while its U.K. predecessor dates back to 1964. And this month it was announced that the fast-fashion chain will be sold in Nordstrom stores starting in September. Go team fashion!

Reiss

This brand is a favorite of Kate Middleton's — the princess donned dresses from the British brand in both her official engagement photos and when she met the Obamas. But don't be fooled by its royal customer — the clothes are priced for everyday princesses, too.

Ben Sherman

Ben Sherman has been pushing the limits in the British fashion industry since 1963, when it created colorful, slim-fitting, button-down shirts for men that would one day make a name for the brand. Now when you want your boy to look presentable for, say, a meet-the-parents date, we suggest you slip him into a Ben Sherman kit.

Vivienne Westwood

We can thank Westwood for bringing punk and edge into the fashion world (not to mention our beloved Pirate Boots). The fashion icon began her career selling homemade jewelry in London's Portobello Market. Fast-forward to Carrie Bradshaw getting ready for her big day in a Westwood-designed wedding gown on "Sex and the City." Well played.

New brew

NYC's Whole Foods Market beer buyer Jeff Wallace's own hoppy home brew was so addictive that the guys at Harpoon Brewery took the recipe and produced it on a large scale. The batch, named "Saison Liaison," which Wallace describes as slightly fruity with a dry finish, is available only for a limited time at Whole Foods. Hurry up and grab a growler full — because according to Wallace, it's the perfect match for your barbecues. $13 for a 32 oz. growler, $25 for a 64 oz. growler

Religious views have no place in public forum

Once again, thanks to Metro for posting narrow viewpoints from narrow-minded individuals in print. Joseph is no different than those preaching faith on the street corner. I find it offensive that the Metro posted this as a letter. News organizations are supposed to take a neutral standpoint. I understand that this may be his viewpoint, but in printing it you are alienating many. Faith is personal and should be a private matter.

PHIL HOWARD, VIA E-MAIL

Evil in killer shows the evil in us all

Many people have asked why James Holmes allegedly murdered while other people with similar personality and background have not done the same. A wise past observer noted, "For from within, out of people's hearts, come evil thoughts, sexual immorality, theft, murder, adultery, greed, malice, deceit" (Mark 7:21, 22). We don't like the "sinner" moniker, but if we label the shooter "evil" then we might have to admit that we are capable of the same. To solve a "problem," it helps to know what the problem is. Perhaps the above-quoted sage might offer a solution.

NORMUND STRAUTIN, VIA E-MAIL

Society needs to put end to violence

We have to look at things in perspective. If James Holmes, one of our best and brightest, could do what happened in Aurora — what does that say for our society? This incident is a terrifying example of the lack of support our kids have today and the easy access to weapons. Hollywood bears its share of blame. The violence they are feeding our 13-year-olds is a disgrace to humanity. Society must act as our Supreme Court fails to protect us.

MARSHA KENDALL, VIA E-MAIL

Second Amendment to oppose despots

The intent of the U.N. Small Arms Treaty is to prevent the American people from being able to protect themselves against a rogue government, like the present one and its predecessor, that seeks to enslave us to their bankster master's New World Order. This was and remains the purpose of the Second Amendment; not to insure hunters have guns, nor for home invasion protection from robbers — but that citizens have them to defend themselves from tyranny. Who would arm Americans against a despot, like we are arming the Syrian people against their despot?

CHARLES M. COUCH, BROOKLYN

What is the big deal about having a photo ID? I have carried one for years. In fact, I just had mine renewed. All I did was go into a Penn Dot office, they are all over the city — and no, I don't drive. They ask your date of birth, sex, color of your eyes and height.

They take your picture and that is it. Go get one and smile for the birdie.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you know there are certain things that can be done that will help advance your financial health, by all means do them. It does no good to postpone action once again.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Do your own thing, because you'll perform best in situations where you have the freedom to act in an independent manner. If you must mingle with others, be a leader not a follower.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Something is going on behind the scenes that will end up benefiting you when it is fully disclosed. You might get your first inkling of it today.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. If at all possible, try to devote as much time as you can to a new endeavor that has recently captured your fancy. Chances are it will turn out lucky.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Don't waste your time on goals of small significance. Instead, focus your efforts on an objective that could result in a major accomplishment once you put your mind to it.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. You might even surprise yourself as to how well you fare when you have total faith in what you want to accomplish. With this mind-set, don't squander your energy on small potatoes.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Even if you aren't the one to initiate a wonderful opportunity to do something important with your friends, your participation in it will help make the endeavor a great success.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Free time won't be an issue for you, and that's as it should be. With a plate full of things that need tending, your only problem is which to do first.

Lin reunion tour

The NBA schedule was released Thursday night and the Rockets and Jeremy Lin will hit Madison Square Garden on Dec. 17.

Lin signed with the Rockets after the Knicks passed on matching Houston's offer sheet and instead traded for Ray Felton. That date will probably be circled on Lin's calendar.

The Nets open up the Barclays Center on Nov. 1 against the Knicks as was rumored earlier in the week.

AWAY FROM IT ALL

Jets hope month in Cortland will shake season to forget on many levels ◐ Last two times ended with AFC title runs ◐ Team feels bonding helps

The solution for a divided Jets locker room last year might just be going away to camp. At least that's what the Jets are hoping will come out of training camp in upstate New York.

For head coach Rex Ryan's first two training camps, the team went four hours away from New York City to Cortland, a city with a population of roughly 19,000 and precious few distractions. The result from those first two years was a tight knit team and consecutive AFC Championship game appearances. Last year the NFL lockout cut into the offseason and the Jets used their team facility in northern New Jersey.

217 It's just a quick four-hour drive and 217 miles from New York City to Cortland, N.Y., on I-81 North.

"We're up here. I don't know if it is a coincidence that we went to the AFC Championship twice," nose tackle Sione Pouha said. "I'm not going to jinx myself, knock on wood on that. But there are some bonding experiences that you have in Cortland that you otherwise won't have somewhere else or in the comforts of your home."

The Jets spent the offseason focused on repairing the wounds from 2011. It was as bad of a locker room as seen in sports in a long time, with teammates calling each other out, players going to Ryan to complain about the coaching staff and an on-field altercation between Dustin Keller and Santonio Holmes in Week 17.

"This is where we need to be," Mark Sanchez said. "This is the best place for us to shut the doors, focus on us, focus on football and really start something special."

Hitching a ride with Tim Tebow

Hayden Smith called shotgun for the three-hour trip from north Jersey to Jets training camp in upstate New York on Thursday morning. His driver? None other than the most talked about athlete in America, Jets quarterback Tim Tebow.

The Australian-born Smith hopped a ride with Tebow and arrived at the team's training camp in Cortland by mid-afternoon, hopping out of the passenger side of Tebow's black Escalade. It was a fun trip for Smith, a former rugby player who is trying to transition into the NFL at tight end. But what was on the radio?

"No radio, [only] chatting. No music," Smith said.

"We were chatting all sorts of things really — Australia, different parts of the world," Smith said. "Tim's grown up playing football playing here in America, and I grew up in different situations. It was two guys talking about shared experiences — and different ones, too.

"We did actually speak football for quite a while," Smith said. "The guy is as sharp as you want; he's all over it. He knows his playbook. He was happy to help me out when I can. "

23 Jets defensive lineman Kenrick Ellis was at camp Thursday after spending 23 days in jail this June on a felony charge from a campus fight in 2010.

45 Ellis's conviction on the felony malicious wounding charge was for 45 days. He will serve the last 22 days once the NFL season is over.

Giants' focus already on improving season

Super Bowl champs not resting on laurels as they open training camp
Manning talks improving regular season Playing strong all season

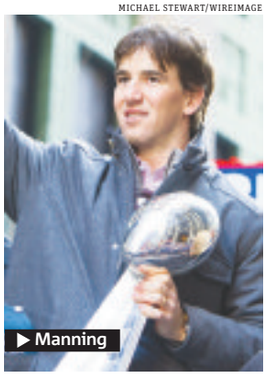
The champs arrived to Albany in slightly quieter fashion than their stadium brethren. When you have a ring, you don't have to do nearly as much talking.

It was business as usual for defending Super Bowl MVP Eli Manning — get to work and try to improve.

"Well I think it's the desire to get better as a team," Manning told reporters on the first day of Giants training camp when asked about the team fearing complacency in camp. "We know we've got to improve. We were 9-7 last year in the regular season. That's not good enough. We were a better team than that. Obviously we showed that throughout the playoffs. We've got to have that urgency, that consistency, throughout the whole season and play our best football for the 16 regular season games."

It's easy to forget just how much the Giants did struggle in the regular season after a run through the playoffs that so mirrored their 2008 title run. The following season the team started 11-1 before Plaxico Burress shot himself and the team fell apart.

MICHAEL STEWART/WIREIMAGE



Manning

This year's team is focused on not letting themselves get backed against the wall and having to claw into the postseason.

"When it's kind of a do or die situation, we seem to step up and play our best," Manning said. "It's just a matter of working extremely hard and getting to the point to where we treat every game, every situation, the same."

Tuck

Tuck not offended by dynasty talk

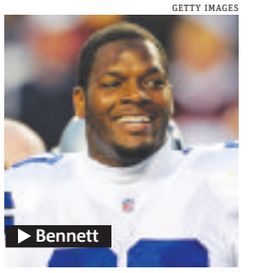
On the first day of Eagles camp quarterback Mike Vick proclaimed his team was aiming to become a "dynasty." No such confidence from the man who will be chasing him all over the field twice this season, Justin Tuck.

"I understood what Michael was saying," Tuck told reporters on the first day of Giants camp. "Obviously, it's going to be blown out of proportion. I think he was just talking about belief in his football team. So I don't see anything wrong with that. It wasn't a slight to any team that won a championship or anything like that."

The team that won a championship would be the one to the north of Vick on I-95. METRO/MO

Bennett 'hates' entire NFL

GETTY IMAGES



Bennett

If you had guessed Martellus Bennett would be the first Giants to open his mouth and provide some bulletin board material you won the pool.

It's probably no surprise it was a former Cowboy who ran afoul of head coach Tom Coughlin's preferred understated approach.

When asked about those Cowboys on the first day of training camp, Bennett felt no need to hold his tongue.

"I really just want to kick those guys' asses," Bennett said. "You know what I'm saying? That's what it's all about, you know? I mean, we're cool, but we ain't that cool. I kind of got some ill feelings towards them. It's a game. Every game is the same way. I kind of hate everybody, honestly, in the NFL.

"I have everybody's date marked on my calendar, honestly. I'm kind of pissed off about a whole lot, so I think it'll be a good year for me."

The two teams meet on Sept. 5. METRO/MO
